Stock Resistance

After the initial reaction to the Japanese disaster and Middle East infighting, the stock market has been quite resilient. It dropped about 6% from peak to trough. Since then, it has bounced back to the top of a trading range that has been a resistance area around 12,300 on the Dow Industrials. It will be interesting to see the path it takes in the weeks ahead.

If it continues to rally, I will hold the positions in the Growth Portfolio. If it begins to roll over, I will take some profits. The reason is that if it rolls over, it will be a mark that the market failed to make a recovery high. It suggests some further consolidation as the news is digested.

The question is two-fold. What effect will the fighting have on oil prices? Will it be

The chart shows the daily S&P 500 with red smoothed line an 80-day moving average. The lower part shows blue volume and red spikes as possible trading signals.

WEEKLY REVIEW

3/28/11 No changes. Sitting tight through the current pullback. It should turn and rally.

3/21/11 No changes.

3/11/11 Hold the bond positions for now. No changes.

3/9/11 I'll move the remainder of cash (money market) into TLH. If stocks pull back, this area should benefit.

2/28/11 Please note that I've raised the stop levels as the bond rally continues.

2/22/11 The contrarian buys from last week have paid off so far, especially the TIP buy.

2/14/11 I'll reenter the bond market again with some contrary oriented buys. Please note the sell stops near recent lows.

SLM Bond Timing Model

The SLM Bond Timing Model is based on the expected direction of the Corporate Bond market. The green bars are bullish (expect higher prices and lower yields) and the red bars are bearish (expect lower prices and higher yields). White spaces indicate that the previous signal is still in effect.

WEEKLY REVIEW

3/28 We're in the pullback and back to mild support. This is drawn as the latest trendlines on the chart above.

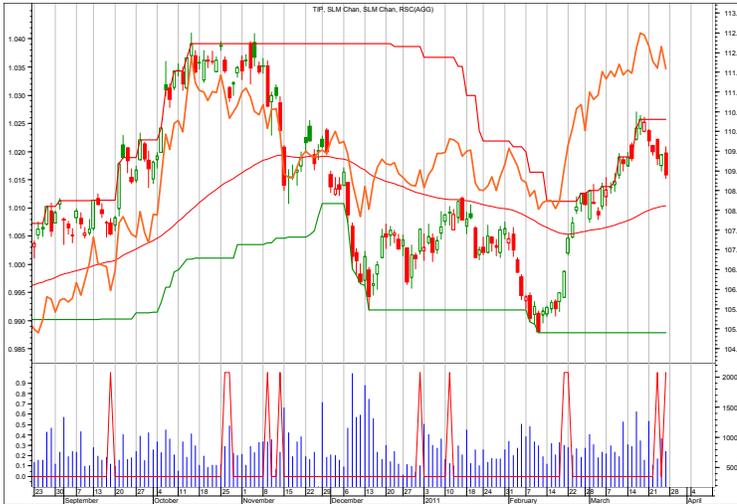

3/21 A pullback would not be unexpected or abnormal. It should not, however, go below previous lows set in early March.

3/11/11 The bond market is confirming its new up trend.

3/9/11 As mentioned on the next page, after the corporate and Treasury bond markets break out to the upside, it pulled back. Time to accumulate.

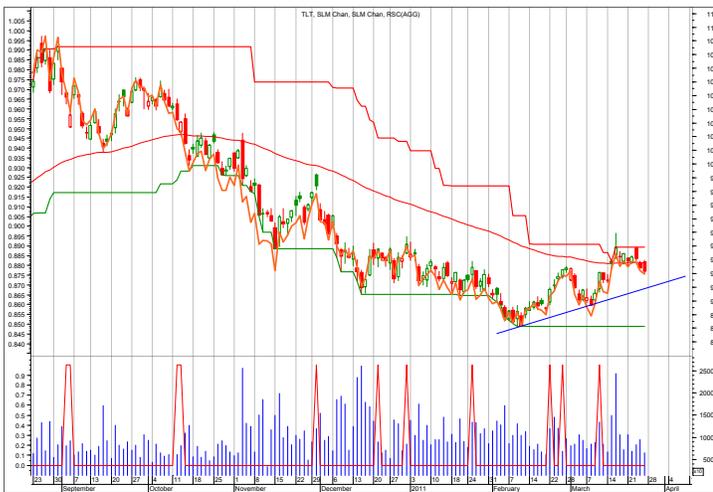

2/28/11 The SLM Bond Timing Model has turned bullish last week. Prices broke upwards through their well-defined down trend lines. This was anticipated.

WEEKLY REVIEW

3/28/11 No changes.

3/21/11 Make the purchases and short as noted above.

3/11/11 No changes this week.

3/9/11 XLE looks like it is turning over and will be sold.

2/28/11 Will continue to stand aside for the most part from the long side of the market. It still appears overbought and under appreciative of the turmoil in the Middle East and North Africa.

2/22/11 Will raise even more cash, given the Middle East uncertainty. The market was very overbought and is due for a correction.

2/14/11 Raised the SLV stop very close. It should either continue it's recovery or fail. Still waiting for a pullback to buy.

This page shows the top ranked ETF Equity Database. It shows performance over the last 12, 9, 6, 3, and 1 months through the previous month's end. V is Volatility. NAV is price. CS is Comet Strength. C is Comet, which is an ETF's risk-adjusted performance; the higher the better.

Generally speaking, we want to own the top-ranked ETFs with 5 and 4 comets. (Comets, not stars, because unlike stars that are fixed, comets come into and out of prominence. We want our thinking, our metaphor aligning with reality.

 2/22/11 Maintain close stop.
 2/14/11 Caught the rally, but watch the declining volume. Watch the stop.
 2/4/11 Holding.

FXI—China

3/28/11 Relatively weak. Hold short. It is at the top of its channel. China is raising rates.

XLE—Energy

3/28/11 Hold.
 3/21/11 Hold
 3/11/11 Stand aside.
 3/9/11 Take profits and stand aside.
 2/28/11 Looks like the makings of a parabolic move. This means that the rate of change increases as time goes by as more speculators pile into the trade. The price may spike higher, but would signal a top.

Each chart shows daily prices (top portion), volume (bottom portion), a moving average (smoothed red line on price portion), a relative performance indicator between the ETF and S&P 500 (orange line), and red spikes. The spikes show potential buy and sell short signals. Generally speaking, if the moving average is trending down, the spike shows a potential sell short. If the moving average is trending up, but the ETF declines, the spike shows a potential buy. The charts do not show selling or covering signals.

permanent or temporary? Already we are at about $3.60 per gallon and the summer driving season has yet to begin. It suggests, all things being equal, that gas will top $4.00 in the next few months. If it stays that high, it would slow the economic recovery.

The second question is the Japanese impact on recovery. Will they sell Treasuries to fund their rebuilding? Higher yields will also hamper the recovery. As well, an asset with cash flow may be “cheap” if you can buy it with 1% money, but becomes “expensive” at 3% money.

This combination of uncertainties will impact the stock market in the days ahead. The market does not like uncertainty. It is easier to sell and stand aside, until things become clearer.

So, the market did react to the points of bad news. It has since rallied back, but is now at major resistance. We will just have to keep a close eye on things in order to either take quick profits from this bounce or hang on for further gains.

The ETF database contains nearly 250 ETFs from various providers. I plan to continue expanding this in the weeks ahead.

The ETF selecting strategy is based on investing with the ETFs that are performing the best based on a risk-adjusted relative performance. Generally speaking, we want to own the strongest performers as shown by the 4 or 5 comet selections and short the 1 or 2 comet selections.

Our guiding goal is to provide the most return with the least risk consistently over time through bull and bear markets.

Income Portfolio, page2: Uses a proprietary selection methodology on all of the monitored bond-oriented ETFs to pick the top ETFs. I then use a proprietary timing model to decide whether to buy, sell, hold, or avoid.

All portfolios were started on 1/1/10 with $100,000.
